To all it may concern-

I am a mother of school age children and we reside in Reno Nevada. I tend to be more democratic and liberal in my political beliefs. I state this because I don't want my thoughts to be demonized as radical right thinking or Q anon nonsense. Also I want the Democratic Party to hear, that if they continue this authoritarian position, they will lose a lot of voters. I'm on the verge of re-registering because this is such an important issue, and my family's health is at stake.

I overwhelmingly oppose vaccine mandates. I overwhelmingly support health freedom. Yes I follow science, not headlines. The science is simply not there to support mandating an experimental jab on the population, especially our children. The data needed to justify this is simply not available, especially the long-term effects. If I followed the headlines every day, I would be led to believe that unvaccinated people are horrible humans who are destroying society. That is a completely misguided and frankly frighteningly narcissistic way of approaching this discussion. It feels way too early in the game to even CONSIDER the words "vaccine mandates". It seems much more productive to be HONESTLY evaluating the vaccines efficacy, doing more outreach on healthy choices individuals can make to boost their immune system, and giving people including mothers like myself a little more credit. I am a college educated working mother, my sister is a pediatrician. If we are hesitant because the data is simply not there to support a massive mandated vaccine campaign, maybe you should listen to us as constituents and functioning members of society. We vote, donate money to campaigns, and demonstrate one of the most important human attributes, critical thinking.

Dissent is the highest form of patriotism. I love my country, I love my family, I love my freedom. Give me liberty or give me death.

NO VACCINE MANDATES.

because Truth always prevails and Love finds the way
