

TRANSMISSION OF HIV IS NO LONGER A FELONY!

A person found criminally liable is now guilty of a misdemeanor.

A person can only be charged with transmitting a communicable disease. Having HIV in itself is not a crime. Failing to use protection alone does not show intentional transmission.

Current medical or epidemiological evidence determine transmission likelihood.

Exposed? Know your rights.

- 1) If possible, explain the likelihood of exposure to your designated health care officer for likely communicable disease exposure.
- 2) File a petition in court. A court will promptly determine whether you were likely exposed to a communicable disease.
- 3) WARNING! A person under investigation must not have their identity and medical information publicly disclosed.

TRANSMISSION OF HIV IS NO LONGER A FELONY!

A person found criminally liable is now guilty of a misdemeanor.

A person can only be charged with transmitting a communicable disease. Having HIV in itself is not a crime. Failing to use protection alone does not show intentional transmission.

Current medical or epidemiological evidence determine transmission likelihood.

Exposed? Know your rights.

- 1) If possible, explain the likelihood of exposure to your designated health care officer for likely communicable disease exposure.
- 2) File a petition in court. A court will promptly determine whether you were likely exposed to a communicable disease.
- 3) WARNING! A person under investigation must not have their identity and medical information publicly disclosed.

TRANSMISSION OF HIV IS NO LONGER A FELONY!

A PERSON FOUND CRIMINALLY LIABLE IS NOW GUILTY OF A MISDEMEANOR.

A person can only be charged with transmitting a communicable disease. Having HIV in itself is not a crime. Failing to use protection alone does not show intentional transmission.

Current medical or epidemiological evidence determine transmission likelihood.

Exposed? Know your rights.

- 1) If possible, explain the likelihood of exposure to your designated health care officer for likely communicable disease exposure.
- 2) File a petition in court. A court will promptly determine whether you were likely exposed to a communicable disease.
- 3) WARNING! A person under investigation must not have their identity and medical information publicly disclosed.