Kimberly Rodriquez, College Student of Southern Nevada emailed:

“Palliative care is not easy. It takes an extensive team of professionals, nonprofessionals, good-hearted individuals, and kind people to provide the utmost precise care the patient needs. Everyone should still receive payment for all their dedication, hard work, and commitment. Planning this event months prior to the celebration day will create a special and fun environment for those attending. This day will raise money for the cause, and it will be an opportunity to socialize, bond, and allow a sense of unity for anyone who knows anyone receiving palliative care.

It is important to recognize to successfully execute the Palliative Care Awareness and Education Day, time and money is needed. This significant day will educate, support, and help spread awareness to the community.”
